Microsoft released the Windows Vista desktop operating system on 29 January 2007. This document outlines our plan to support the U2 products and components that need to run on a desktop platform, such as server consoles, end-points/agents, development tools, and productivity applications.

Microsoft released the Windows Vista desktop operating system on 29 January 2007. The following document outlines our plan to support the U2 products and components that need to run on a desktop platform, such as server consoles, end-points/agents, development tools, and productivity applications. U2 data servers and SB+ will be evaluated for support with Windows 2008, Microsoft's server operating system when it is released later in 2008.

We will need to complete certification and testing of each product or component to understand if any engineering changes will be required to support the Vista environment before announcing specific releases of the products and their support levels. In some cases existing releases may function in the Vista environment. In others, a new release of a product or component may be required.

* When initiating setup to install on Windows Vista, Windows will prompt you with a warning dialog box titled "User Account Control" that has a message: An unidentified program wants access to your computer. You will be presented with two options, Cancel or Allow the setup.exe to proceed. It is okay to proceed past this warning by selecting the Allow option. SBCClient 5.4.2, scheduled for release early in 2008 will resolve this.

On-line help is not supported. Support for .HLP files has not been provided with Windows Vista. If your computer is connected to the internet Windows will open the browser and take you to MS Knowledge Base and you will be presented with a web page titled: Windows Help program (WinHlp32.exe) is no longer included with Windows. @ SBCClient is 32-bit but compatible with 64-bit versions of Windows Vista.

We plan to announce support for the following products and components with Eclipse dependency on Windows Vista 32-bit by 5/31/2007.

& U2 Web Designer Only

U2 Tools bundled with the data server will be tested and supported in two groups. Those that are not dependent on Eclipse will be tested first. If testing proves that component is Vista compatible without change, we will update this document. UniData 7.1B clients, released October 31, 2007 and later, and UniVerse 10.2A clients, scheduled for release in early 2008, will be Vista compatible per the table below.
